The Houston Brass Band is a British-style brass band that consists of cornets, flugelhorn, tenor horns, baritones, euphoniums, and the more familiar trombones, tubas, and percussion instruments. These bands gained popularity in the early 1800s during the industrial revolution in Great Britain, and, to this day, many British companies have bands associated with them. The British-style brass band is gaining popularity in America, and the Houston Brass Band is recognized as a leader in this genre.
